

Introducing SENT 2007

For the past 10 years, we had been sending six-week youth teams to Ghana with the purpose of “getting their feet wet” in foreign missions. While these teams were very fulfilled in their singing and preaching exercises in the schools, it left them somewhat void of the practical realities of mission life. The mission board along with the missionaries felt a great need for more extensive training to further prepare these youth for the future. Getting their feet wet is good, but they really need to “learn to swim”.

Out of this burden was born SENT (Serving Every Nation Training) School. This twelve-week school held in Ghana would enable them to learn many hands on realities in the daily grind of mission life. The first SENT team of twenty has returned. Their changed lives give testimony to the power of God’s grace to mold and prepare youth for the challenge of mission life.

Daniel Kenaston, the SENT school administrator, with Jeremy Wollman as his right hand man, did an excellent job with the twenty youth who undoubtedly were outside their comfort zone. The disciplines of the living space, strange food and culture, along with a rigid schedule, generously afforded each student much opportunity to practice self-denial.

A sincere “Thank You” to all the missionaries for their labors in serving the SENT Team 2007!

We are planning another term for October through December 2008.

Application Requirements

If you would like to enroll in SENT 2008 or future SENT teams, please request an application from the mission office. Currently, we are accepting students only on an application basis. You must apply if you wish to enroll! We will mail an application to you, which you will return for the board’s review. We will then contact you to let you know whether your application has been accepted.

Following are several requirements that we have established for enrollment in the SENT School. These will be continually reviewed and may be modified in the future.

- You must be a born-again Christian who has a heart for missions.
- Applicants must be at least 19 years of age.
- We are only enrolling unmarried individuals at this time.

—The Charity Mission Board

Dates for SENT 2008 will be from mid-October through mid-December
