

Greetings in Jesus' Precious Name,

We are praising God for the many wonderful things He did in the hearts of the students last year, our first SENT Team year. Once again we are expecting God to do great things in the hearts and lives of the next twenty young people going this October. We are praying that God would give clear vision and direction of what it takes to be a minister of the Gospel, whether at home or abroad. This school is not for the faint-in-heart, and requires a great deal of challenging studying, reading, and gives practical hands-on experiences. The students will also experience a culture that does not very well accommodate our easy Western lifestyle. We believe they will come away with some valuable ministry skills/training that will be most useful for their future, whether they return to the foreign field or not. Our desire and burden is for young people to be gripped with a passion for the lost. We have striven to gear all of the students' activities and studies towards that end.

You should also keep in mind that the SENT Team is full for term 2008 and that we are accepting applications on a “first come-first chosen” basis for SENT 2009! If you are a young person desiring to get some practical, every day, hands-on, overseas/home ministry training, we encourage you to apply as soon as possible.

Thank you for your interest in what God is doing through the SENT School. We greatly appreciate your prayers for God's direction and blessing on the behalf of the students, teachers, and administrators.

SENT 2007 Student Testimony

What has revolutionized my life the most through the SENT School is the realization that I have a personal responsibility to share the gospel with the heathen. The realization that God has saved me, not to sit on my blessings, but to share with others, has gripped me in a way that it never has before. There's something about being right in the middle of a third world country that really opened my eyes to these things. I saw my responsibility as a Christian to the heathen in a way that I have never seen it before.

I think studying about missions while being immersed in the disciplines that the missionaries face all the time, i.e., limited communication with home, forcing one's self to eat “unpalatable food”, experiencing “lights out” at the most inconvenient times, and often feeling like you don't quite have your “healthy” living without the conveniences of modern plumbing, etc. helps to keep us from getting a romantic view of mission life. We have watched first hand and somewhat experienced how the missionaries live sacrificial lives and it does something to solidify all the teachings we are hearing and the visions God is giving us in our own hearts.

A side benefit of the SENT School is the interaction we as a team have with each other. We come from many different places; even different cultures! It has been an excellent opportunity for us to learn to appreciate other cultures and learn to work well with different people. I think this is beneficial in preparing to live and work closely with co-missionaries in the future on the field.
